Financial Need Statement

Complete this form if you cannot provide any of the other three ways of documenting financial need: a Pell eligibility notice, a current-year FAFSA Submission Summary, or a financial aid office statement of unmet need. If you can provide one of those, send it instead and leave this form blank.

Not filing a FAFSA does not affect your eligibility. Report figures for a single academic year, and where an exact amount is not yet published, give your best estimate and say so in section 6.

1. Why you are using this form

Check all that apply. None of these counts against an application.

- ☐ I did not file a FAFSA for this year.
- ☐ My program does not participate in federal student aid.
- ☐ My federal aid determination shows little or no need, but my costs are not covered.
- ☐ My financial aid office does not issue an unmet need statement.
- ☐ Pell Grants do not apply to my degree level.
- ☐ Other. Explained in section 6.

4. Resources available for the same year

Institutional grants and scholarships
Outside scholarships and fellowships
Employer, agency, or military education assistance
Student loans accepted or expected
Personal earnings and savings applied to school
Family or other contribution actually expected
B. Total resources

5. Remaining need

C. Remaining need (line A minus line B)

The committee scores line C measured against line A, so that applicants at different degree levels are compared on equal terms rather than on absolute dollars. A federal aid formula showing little or no need does not by itself disqualify an applicant. Report what your family will actually contribute, not what a formula assumes.

6. Anything the committee should understand about these figures

Optional, about 150 words. Use this space for dependents you support, a change in income, hours you work while enrolled, why family contribution is lower than a formula would assume, or any figure above that is an estimate.

7. Certification

I certify that the figures in this statement are accurate and complete to the best of my knowledge. I understand that the Foundation may ask for supporting documentation, and that a scholarship from the Foundation is an outright gift that carries no repayment obligation and no service obligation.
